RESERVE REDEVELOPMENT

St Kilda Football Club, on behalf of seven project partners, has submitted a town planning permit application to revitalise the Moorabbin Reserve precinct through construction of an elite, purpose-built training and administration base to complement Kingston Council's broader plans for the social and economic development of the area.

By creating a new facility that is an activity hub for the local community, St Kilda Football Club are striving to create facilities that ensure a variety of experiences for a diverse range of people to enjoy.

- An indoor court for basketball and netball training and competition;
- A public piazza that can be used for a range of community events;
- A dedicated space for Junction Studio, a new platform for St Kilda Football Club to engage with the community, along with bookable meeting rooms, lecture theatre and function room;

Will the development affect the existing use of the reserve?

While football is a key component, the facility is being designed with a place making focus to complement the existing uses of the reserve, provide a significant amount of non-sport public uses and encourage the participation of local residents.

As a part of the redevelopment, St Kilda Football Club is releasing back to the Kingston City Council leased space on the east side of the reserve that has had significant landscaping and revegetation work undertaken by the local community. This part of the reserve is also acknowledged as a regular off-leash dog walking area for local residents .

The City of Kingston is also undertaking a Moorabbin Reserve Park Plan that will concentrate on this eastern area and which St Kilda Football Club and the other Moorabbin Reserve Redevelopment project partners strongly support.

When are works expected to commence?

Subject to securing town planning approval, demolition of the existing facilities is expected to commence in the latter months of 2016.
